T. C. Lewis & Co's Michelle Roche' headed up fundraising within the company to fuel the event that served more than seventy people with a nice, hot meal yesterday. The Bristol Tennessee/Virginia Association of Realtors, T. C. Lewis & Co, and Hospice teamed up to provide some well-deserved relief and a worry-free dinner for families with sick loved ones in Bristol. "The families seemed to be in good spirits, and it was nice to see all the smiles," said Roche'. The families fed have all been financially devastated by a health crisis- some are nearing homelessness.

Cory Lewis added, "It's always nice to help those with sick loved ones- especially in light of the current debate on healthcare reform. We see it all the time in real estate. Most of the foreclosures in our region are due in large part to medical expenses overwhelming families, and they simply choose to take care of their loved one over keeping their home. I can't blame them, and we're always interested in helping these folks out when we can. It's something everybody should consider moving into this holiday season."

The BTVAR has made the Hospice partnership an annual event, and T. C. Lewis & Co. has plans to do the same.
